The IRIS

Oh beautifull! beautifull! flower!
The ward of the sunbeam and shower
In garments of woven delight,
Of the sunset, Aurora and light.
While over thy beauty there plays
Such blending of color and shade,
Such delicate tinting and rays,
Well becoming a heavenly maid.
Ethereal lovely and sweet,
Thy presence we joyously greet.

Thy Mother, fair Iris, in beauty supreme,
Took all her rich fabrics of loveliest sheen,
The robes of the rainbow, flower garden of air,
Of bewildering beauty, resplendently fair,
And made for her child such a dazzling dress
No daughter of royalty e'er could possess.

Though her form seems so fragile, yet wondrously brave,
Away in the Northland where fierce tempest rave,
She wakes from her sleep in her cradle of snow
And beams on the world with a radiant glow.
Away on the plains in the drought and the heat,
She is cheerfully waiting admirers to greet.
To her fairy presence must ever belong
The tribute of praise and the rapture of song.

IRIS TIME, "WHAT A GLORIOUS RESURRECTION!"

I wish to thank all my friends and customers for their past support and enthusiastic appreciation. You are cordially invited to visit my garden during the blooming season or at any time. My Iris garden is conducted largely for the happiness that it brings my friends and an attempt to reveal in a simple, helpful way something of the soul satisfying fascination and happiness. My collection represents one of the largest and finest.

This catalog is written by an Iris grower and Iris lover. I am aware that flower lovers desire the best they can get and this purpose is to make easy the selection of the best for the least money and to possess every worthwhile Iris. This is your catalog and my efforts are all for your convenience and pleasure. I believe I am now giving you a world of interesting information to the Iris public. There is a difference in the viewpoints as you will discover going through its pages.

Fortunate the man or woman that chooses a vocation in nature's realm. They reap some of the joys of living intended for every creature called to life. Iris culture is a delightful soul-satisfying hobby with which to occupy one's leisure hours. It opens up avenues of close communion with nature. It enriches one's outlook and interest and provides inspiration with which to face with greater courage the cares that infest the day. If you will plant a few well-chosen varieties of good Iris and go out in the garden among the growing, gorgeous, gay blooming, delightfully fragrant Iris early in the morning as the sun is rising you will feel abundantly repaid.

Open your soul to their inspiration and thank God for this beautiful world.

Beauty Is Wealth—
Raise Plenty of It and Be Rich.
Flowers Are an Aid to Health.

The happiness of the wife and mother depends much on her surroundings. The soul of a woman hungers for the beautiful. Many a woman has slowly pined away and died of starvation of soul. Give her the companionship of the most beautiful, the purest, best dressed and best behaved company on earth and her spirit is satisfied.

IRIS CULTURAL DIRECTIONS

Iris grow easier and multiply faster than any other perennial. Plant them in a sunny location that has a good drainage. Iris are easy to cultivate and can be planted almost any time the ground is not frozen. Do not plant too deep. Plant so that the rhizome is just below the surface. Spread out the roots and water the hole. Then draw the earth around the rhizome and firm well. If the soil is heavy and the drainage poor a raised bed and application of hydrated lime is advisable. Never use manure or leaves as they are likely to cause rot. Varieties that increase rapidly should be divided and reset every third year. Iris seem to succeed over a greater range of territory than any other plant, notwithstanding the cold of Canada and the heat of Mexico. A light covering of straw put over the tender Iris after the ground freezes will help to carry your plants safely through the winter. Good bloom the following spring may be expected from well-matured plants which make a reasonable growth in the fall.

TALL BEARDED and BEARDLESS IRIS

(Including Intermediate, Fall Blooming and Dwarfs.)

EARLY DWARF IRIS

The dwarf, or pumila, iris are the joy of the early garden—colorful, so sure to grow, so fragrant. Indispensable for the rock garden, very effective for the front of the border. For best results, they should be divided every two or three years, and replanted with a little light fertilizer. Dwarfs bloom approximately four weeks.

THE EARLY INTERMEDIATE IRIS

These early Iris, blooming between the pumilas and the tall bearded, are very necessary in our garden pictures. They furnish fine color masses, and combine very effectively with the Darwin tulips.

Hybridizers have recently been turning their attention to this group, and are producing large flowered varieties of fine form and color.

| CHARLES ARTHUR, (Callis, 1939). Combination of a golden buff and garnet brown. Standards light russet vinaceous with yellow glow through the center. Falls, a tourmaline pink. With a golden beard. This Iris has so many different colorings one must stand and study it to see which colors to mention. A very large flower. Five and six blooms on one stalk. Mid-season. Very fragrant. This is a very hardy Iris, enduring the hottest, driest, or coldest weather. A stalwart giant in tones of golden buff and rosy pink. This Iris is a rampage grower. A single clump often displays a score or more of open blooms at one time..... | 15.00 |

| ELKHART, (Lap., 1937). 38 inches. A new and brilliant Iris, a deep fiery chestnut red in certain lights, brown in others, but always glowing. Large, rounded in shape, well branched .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 5.00  |
| ELLA MAE, (Callis, 1939). This is a difficult Iris to describe. The exact coloring being a very subtle one. The falls a deep pearly mauve. The flower is a self except generous opaulettes on warm copper brown on the haft. This giant Iris has falls so broad that they measure three and one-half inches across. Unlike some of the extra large varieties, it has very good color. It contributes a sprightly touch of contrast. One must see this Iris to enjoy it and give the right description. Next year I hope to study it more during the blooming season. A judge of the American Iris Society visiting a garden exclaimed: "Why not introduce that beauty?" Late. Tall. 42 inches. Good branching. Completely hardy..... | 20.00 |
| ELLA WINCHESTER, (Grinter, 1935). Large, superb, glowing mahogany red with thick velvety petals. 40 inches.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 2.00  |

| IDA ANVALARY, (Callis, 1938).        | One of the loveliest of the new introductions. Standards a deep lavender, falls lavender streaked with white, a golden beard. Fragrance of a honey-white locust. A few of these in the room perfumes the entire house. The flower is large and flaring with broad petals; forty to forty-two inches; a very profuse bloomer; the flower is of a very heavy substance and smooth with a heavy branching stalk. Really outstanding in color and perfect in form. In every respect a glorious new Iris..... | 7.00 |

| LOUIS PASTEUR, (Callis, 1939). A softly beautiful Iris which gains in popularity as it ages. A very delicate flower of waxy white. Louis Pasteur is admired by many Iris lovers for the uprightness and carriage of the stalk, having several blossoms on it. Makes a splendid Iris for the garden and cut flowers, as it is only 30 inches high. This pure white waxy Iris with a golden beard and attractive haft markings of gold and semi-flowering falls has a most pleasing odor similar to that of a wild rose. Midseason. A rich, lustrous white Iris..... | 10.00 |

| MISSOURI GOLD , (Callis, 1938). The large flowers are a dazzling buttercup yellow with an orange tinge. The falls are flaring and of good substance and the whole flower is greatly enriched by an orange beard. Well branched, five and six blooms well placed on the stem. The heavy wind and burning sun did not affect them. Very late. Fragrance as Caprice; 36 inches high; of rare color; vigorous and hardy.....                                                                                                                                             | 5.00  |
| MISSOURI NIGHT , (Callis, 1938). A large rich dark velvety blue. When fully expanded it lightens a little but remains self through. The flower is large and the falls flare, brilliant orange beard contributes to its color. The branching and placement of the flower is one of the good features and striking appearance. Long and late bloomer. 30 inches high. Sun and rain do not affect this beautiful dark blue Iris. This is entirely different from the other deep dark blues, really indigo with a sheen. Grape hyacinth fragrance. Profuse bloomer ..... | 10.00 |

| SAINT JOSEPH, (Callis, 1938). A magnificent white plicata of Theodolinda type, but even more beautiful and outstanding with a deep golden beard. The large flowers have good substance, from 45 to 50 inches tall, and a profuse bloomer, and exquisite lavender etching around the standards, and half of the falls. Fragrance of a honeysuckle; is especially valuable in the garden because of its hardiness and prolific blooming habit. This plicata is one of the most outstanding of plicatas that I have grown in my garden.. | 7.00 |

| WHITE CREPE , (Gers.; Ashley, 1934). Pure snow white, slight reticulations on haft, medium large, fine form and substance; free in bloom; 9 to 12 buds. Fine weather resistance, long season.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1.00  |
| WHITE FROST , (Callis, 1934). The only way one can describe this beautiful white frosty looking iris is to get up one frosty morning and look all around and see the ground all covered with frost. The falls have a few dark purple markings at the haft. It has a yellow beard. Violet and brown markings at haft of standard. They're a profuse bloomer. Fragrant; thirty inches.....                                                                                                                                                                       | 1.00  |
| WHITE GODDESS , (Nesmith, 1936). Very large, well domed standards of pure white, the falls are extremely arched and flaring and are also pure white, yellow beard and white style branches. The large flowers are glistening white and are borne on tall sturdy stalks.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 10.00 |
| WHITE KNIGHT , (Saunders, 1916). Snow white of waxy texture.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | .10   |
| WHITE QUEEN , (Geylenkek, 1918). Small white flower; 30 inches. (Bearded)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | .10   |
| WHITE SISTER , (Gers.; Ashley, 1935). The smallest of this white trio and the earliest, and if possible the most free in bloom. The three form a grand trio of dainty white Iris. A vast improvement over White Queen. Does not sunburn; compact growth. Ten buds.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 1.00  |
| WHITE STAR , (Nichols, 1928). Pure white without any markings.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | .25   |
| WILD ROSE , (Sturtevant, 1921). Dainty pale wild rose pink with white beards                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | .25   |
| WILLIAM ASBURY , (Callis, 1939). A very tall gracious new pink. Entirely self. A deeper pink than Dogrose or Pink Opal. Grows well and is an all-round Iris. No garden should be without this outstanding, lone-blooming self pink Iris. A colorful, velvety pink. Good size, well branched and of unusual substance. Come into bloom just as the intermediates are fading, bridging a gap before the fine late bearded Iris. Most attractive. Definitely worthwhile. A prolific bloomer with many flowers to each stem. 40 inches. Fragrance as Caprice ..... | 10.00 |
| WINE GLORY , (Weed). Color combination is of red and purple, violet and some other shades. The color of the flower is difficult to describe as it is neither brilliant red nor purple.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 1.00  |
| WINNESHEIK , (Egel., 1931). Large blooms and one of the best deep blue blacks we have seen.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | .50   |
| WINTER MOON , (Thole). A large cream white of fine form with green blue shadows; haft flushed and reticulated green gold; orange chrome beard.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 1.00  |
| WITCHING HOUR , (Washington, 1938). The arched and domed standards are buff yellow with faint flesh pink tinge. The falls are of the same tone and are dusted with burnished gold well down from the throat, giving the effect of powdered gold. Seven branched stalks and also the branches are branched. A luscious yellow flower of firm substance, and the most remarkable and fine branching that I have ever seen in an Iris. Very late blooming. 41 inches .....                                                                                        | 15.00 |
| WONDER CHILD , (Weed, 1933). S. red-violet; F. blue violet, suffused red, edges lighter. Light gold beard. Brown and white markings at base. Six or more blossoms to a 40-inch well-branched stalk.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 1.00  |
| WOODLAND , (Hall, 1925). #### FALL BLOOMING IRIS

These new Iris will add beauty to your garden in the fall as well as in the spring and will produce two or more normal crops of Iris each year. What a wonderful surprise and joy some hot August afternoon or chilly October morning to find a new Iris bloom. They are all quite hardy; can be planted any time and require the same treatment as the Tall Bearded Iris. Interest in fall bloomers is increasing rapidly.
